The Green Man Is Now On Montana PBS!

MusEco Media and Education Project, a Billings-based educational non-profit organization focused on environmental sustainability, music, and Native American issues is thrilled to announce that its production, Green Smarts with the Green Man, is now being broadcast on Montana PBS!

Green Smarts with the Green Man is a series produced in the Billings area that features The Green Man, a loveable, comical character whose green living antics are the talk of the town.

Green Smarts with the Green Man is a one-minute long program that allows viewers a quick peek into the fun and foibles of living an environmentally sustainable life – or trying to, anyway!

The episodes are produced by MusEco Media and Education Project (www.MusEco.org) in a sustainable, earth-friendly fashion! (MusEco is a two-time recipient of Montana's EcoStar award!)

Green Smarts with the Green Man has been airing on CBS-affiliate KTVQ and the CW Network in Billings, since 2009. By expanding to Montana PBS, Green Smarts with the Green Man will reach the entire State of Montana! Montana PBS is available via cable, satellite, and over the airwaves.

MusEco is working to expand our broadcasts to more television networks throughout the State of Montana. Please contact MusEco if your station would like to broadcast the program.

In addition to the television series, The Green Man makes personal appearances at schools and public events by invitation, where he provides information and resources about living a sustainable life and answers pressing questions about green living and inevitably, his beard.

For more information about The Green Man, or to reach his “people,” go to www.GreenManTV.org or use the contact information above.
